

History of Argument Part 2, 26 Jul 2022

be amiss

to flout moral values

to inflict divisive politics on to easily disprove sth

sheer audacity

to demand partisanship

polarising messages

to exacerbate

to misrepresent the public will

to print sth verbatim

hurriedly written speeches

inconceivable

to tiptoe on a dangerous path

sth was on the line

a narrow faction

a long-winded speech

on the receiving end

to encapsulate the argument

an innocuous act

a thought experiment

be teething on the edge of civil war

to coincide with

at the far opposite extreme to reward extremism

to cling onto power

deeper undercurrents

seasoned practitioners

addicted to validation

to pursue a defamation case consumed by self-doubt

conflict-averse